When the billion strong poor have no political freedom to agitate for prime needs, when despair drives chunks of people to turn militant in defence of their right to live with dignity, the State, controlled by the proprietariat, would seek to suppress the proletariat by arbitrary laws. Another line adopted is to release police terror, regardless of human rights legality. Institutional protection of victims of State violence is often inadequate and repressive organs and violent gangs revel in assault on people's rights. Civilian morale slumps when the State itself takes sides. And courts look unperturbed at the harsh laws, however undemocratic or despotic they be and basic freedoms become judicial casualty. The TADA, the MISA, the Emergency Laws etc. on which I will dwell later, are cases where lachrymations about breaches of human rights have found poor response and even brutal violations pass judicial scrutiny.

- Directions (Questions 41-44) : Read the following passage and answer the questions given below it :
- The capitalist system of society does not foster healthy relations among human beings. A few people owe all the means of production and others-though nominally few have to sell their labour under conditions imposed upon them. The emphasis of capitalism being on the supreme importance of material with the intensity of its appeal is to the acquisitive intensity. It promotes worship of economic power with little regard to the means employed for its acquisition and the end that it serves. By its exploitation of human beings to the limits of endurance its concentration is on the largest profit rather than maximum production. Thus the division of human family is done on the basis of economic circumstance. All this is injurious to division of human dignity. And when the harrowed poor turn to the founders of religion for succor, they rather offer a subtle defense of the established order. They promise future happiness for their present suffering and conjure up visions of paradise to redress the balance, the religion justifies it.

Directions (Q. Nos. 36 to 40): Read the given passage carefully and attempt the questions that follow and shade the appropriate answer in the space provided for it on the OMR answer sheet.

It is an old saying that knowledge is power. Education is an instrument which imparts knowledge and, therefore, indirectly controls power. Therefore, ever since the dawn of our civilisation, persons in power have always tried to supervise or control education. It has been handmaid of the ruling class. During the Christian era, the ecclesiastics controlled the institution of education and diffused among the people the gospel of the Bible and religious teachings. These gospels and teachings were no other than a philosophy for the maintenance of the existing society. It taught the poor man to be meek and to earn his bread with the sweat of his brow, while the priests and the landlords lived in luxury and fought duels for the slightest offence. During the Renaissance, education passed more from the clutches of the priest into the hands of the prince. In other words, it became more secular. Under the control of the monarch, education began to devise and preach the infallibility of its masters, the monarch or king. It also invented and supported theories like "The Divine Right Theory" and that the king can do no wrong, etc. With the advent of the industrial revolution, education took a different turn and had to please the new masters. It now no longer remained the privilege of the baron class, but was thrown open to the new rich merchant class of the society. During this period, the function of the state was restricted to a mere maintenance of law and order while on the other hand, in practice the law of the jungle prevailed in the form of free competition and the survival of the fittest.
